Diplomat in Moscow Can't Run for Mayor

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
ASHKELON. — Aris Eliav, at present First Secretary at the Embassy in Moscow, has lost his right to vote in the Ashkelon Municipal elections, and therefore to stand as a candidate for Mayor. The decision was handed down by Magistrate M. Cohen, of Jerusalem, following an appeal by Eliav against his exclusion from the Voters' Register.
Mr. Eliav was formerly a Director of Harel Lachish and owns a house in Ashkelon. He resigned from his post to study at the Hebrew University and after completing his course was sent by the Foreign Ministry to Moscow two years ago.
Recently, a group of Ashkelon residents decided to nominate him for Mayor and only when they examined the Voters' Register was it discovered that his name had been omitted.
An appeal was immediately lodged, but Magistrate Cohen ruled that it was submitted too late. Eliav's absence abroad on a national service not being considered a mitigating circumstance.

Jerusalem 'Grows' by 60% As City Limits Extended

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Jerusalem Municipality on Sunday evening decided to extend the city limits by 22,500 dunams — thus increasing the present city area of 37,000 dunams by 60 per cent. Only Mr. Yehuda Blau (Agudat Yisrael) abstained. All other Councillors supported the motion. The Municipality's decision must be approved by the Ministry of Interior, which will set up a special committee to study the move.

The new city limits will now include Meir Neftcha, Mevaseret Yerushalayim, Mevaseret Zion, both Upper and Lower Motza, the Hadassah Medical Centre overlooking Ein Karem, and the Swedish Village near Kiryat Yovel.

In summing up the discussion, Mr. Moshe Shalom, Vice-Mayor, noted that the city, within its present limits, could accommodate a population increase of 100,000. The city's population is now 165,000, but there was no reason why it should not expand towards the coast. However, only in this additional area of 22,500 dunams could be found 2,000-3,000 dunams for another industrial zone.

About 5,500 persons lived in this area. It would cost the Municipality about IL40,000 to build roads, IL40,000 to lay water pipelines and IL15,000 to install lighting.

Before the vote was taken, the opposition Councillors opposed the motion.

Shazar Still Rubashov, Histadrut Lashes Communal Rioting

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Histadrut on Sunday issued a strongly worded condemnation of "rioting and attempts at terrorizing entire communities under the guise of communal leadership." The recent series of disturbances, the statement said, "were aimed at sabotaging the integration of the various communities and at splitting the nation and the labour movement."

After calling on all members of the Labour Federation to unite around the banner of a united nation, the Histadrut Central Committee expressed its appreciation of the actions of the police "who maintained order in such an exemplary fashion."

The plenary of the Histadrut Executive is to convene in the middle of this month to discuss the absorption of immigrants and communal integration. A decision to this effect was adopted at the Central Committee meeting on Sunday.

The Executive will also discuss the joint appeal of Mapam and Abud Ha'avoda against the recent agreement between the Histadrut and the Manufacturers Association not to pay an additional cost of living allowance.

Most Election Roll Appeals Upheld

TEL AVIV. — Of some 260 appeals against omissions in the Voter Register heard before District Court Judge Y. Lamm on Sunday, only about 30 per cent were rejected. The majority were accepted with the agreement of Interior Ministry representatives and a decision on the remainder was deferred until next week for the presentation of additional evidence.

The courtroom was packed with some lawyers for the appellants having to stand during the proceedings. Lawyers in general stated their cases briefly and most of the cases were handled quickly, particularly when representatives of the Interior Ministry offered no objections.

Appeals were turned down mainly because the appellants had not submitted to the Ministry of Interior by the May 12 deadline or because Ministry representatives proved that the appellants were still citizens of their countries of origin.

Among the appellants were a number of soldiers. (Itim)

Demonstrators Protest Smoke from Dye Plant

Jerusalem Post Reporter

RAMAT GAN. — Some 500 local residents demonstrated Sunday outside the gates of the "Keshet" factory in Rehovot, complaining that the heavy smoke emitted from the plant's chimneys endangered their families' health.

They told The Jerusalem Post that over six months ago they appealed to the municipality to transfer the firm's dyeing plant to another zone or to convince the management to use a different type of fuel that produced less smoke.

The residents alleged that the municipality had disregarded their protests and that the plant was adding wings to its premises. They also claimed that recent medical examinations proved that the smoke had slightly affected the lungs of several local children.

If the municipality did not do something about the situation, they would stop paying rates, they threatened.

F.A. Wants Olympic Preliminaries Put Off

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Because of a heavy schedule of international matches in the autumn, the Israel Football Association has asked its Greek counterpart to postpone the Olympic Games preliminary meet between the two countries until March 1960. The match was scheduled for November 1 at Ramat Gan.

Last Session Of Present Knesset

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

The final regular weekly session of the Third Knesset began this afternoon, and is expected to end late on Wednesday night.

The life of the Third Knesset will end on the Fourth Knesset is convened after the November elections.

Among the legislation to be dealt with this week is the Water Bill, the second reading of which was begun last week, and the Civil Service Bill restricting political activity and fund-raising by officials, which passed its first reading last December.

The Bill for the Encouragement of Capital Investment is expected to be given its second and third readings, as is the Bill on the Oil Pipeline Concession.

National Lands Bill

Minister of Finance Levi Eshkol is scheduled to present for its first reading a Basic Law on National Lands. But this is considered to be a "symbolic" reading only. It is not being expected that the bill will be prepared for its second reading.

There are many other measures ready for their second reading, including the Family Allowance Bill and the Land Leasing Bill.

A piece of "old business" deferred last week is the vote on a number of bills calling for the abolition of Military Government and a statement by the Prime Minister on the subject.

It is doubtful whether the President will agree to grant "urgent" priority to the motion for the agenda submitted by Herut calling for a debate on the latest Wadi Salib riots.

Dayan Visits Migdal Ma'barot

Jerusalem Post Reporter

ASHKELON. — Moshe Dayan paid a surprise visit to the Ma'barot of Migdal Ashkelon on Sunday evening. At 5.45 p.m. he parked his car near the Migdal court-house and walked down the street. In a few minutes, the famous eye-patch was spotted by hundreds of people and the word flashed around town that Dayan was there.

When he arrived at Ma'barot Bet he was greeted by demonstrations of affection, while at the same time some of the inhabitants, who held him to be a purveyor of grievances, the visitor went into a number of the shacks and talked to the inhabitants.

Several young men, recently discharged from the army, said that they could get neither jobs nor housing, and that their parents could not accommodate them in their shacks.

Dayan made no promises and repeatedly said that he was neither a Labour Exchange official nor a Social Welfare Department worker, but had only come to see for himself.

From Ma'barot Bet, he went through the old Arab town. His tour lasted several hours, and when he stopped for coffee at a local cafe he was still trailed by a large following, reacting with good humour to the attentions of the crowd.

Dayan indicated to this respect that he would like to see his practice of paying similar visits to other Ma'barot.

Fined for Crash in Which Grandmother Died

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A 25-year-old man whose grandmother was killed in an accident while riding pillion on his motorcycle was on Sunday sentenced in the Magistrate's Court here to a IL100 fine or three months in prison. His licence was revoked for two years.

Magistrate S. Rosenfeld, in passing sentence said that the accused, Nahum Litvak, of Ramat Gan, had already been punished by the fact that the accident was his own grandmother, while he himself had been badly injured.

The accident occurred in September 1958, when Litvak collided with a truck while riding his 70-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Spushnik, on the back seat of his motorcycle. (Itim)

IL750 Fine For Woman's Death

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A Dan bus driver, Yehoshua Siman-Tov, was on Sunday fined IL750 with the alternative of three months in jail, and given a six-month suspended sentence, for causing the death of a pedestrian in July 1958. The victim, a 57-year-old woman, was killed while crossing the intersection of the Hahar quarter-Kfar Shamron road.

Magistrate Y. Cohen-Megory, in passing sentence, said that the present increase in the number of road accidents resulted from "the imposition of lenient sentences on drivers who ignore the law and the rules of safety. Exemplary punishments should be meted out," he added. (Itim)

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Delal was on the back of the vehicle, together with another council employee. The train crashed into them as the truck crossed the Herzliya-seashore railroad junction.

The train stopped for a short while after the accident but later continued on its way.

Fined for Making Girl Friend 'Older'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

A IL250 fine and a one-year suspended sentence have been imposed by the Jerusalem District Court on a 27-year-old man, Yosef Dary, for making a "slight amendment" to the age of his young girl friend, who has been in service slightly less than two.

El Al's passenger traffic in 1959 is running about 10 per cent above the level of last year — the Tenth Anniversary of the airline, and should reach 150,000 seats sold.

Reporting on the annual conference of the International Civil Aviation Organization which met in San Diego earlier this month, Mr. Michael said that most countries are now looking forward to the super-sonic jet age.

Auxiliary services — bookings, ground transport and radio and telecommunications — which it was said, must not be allowed to fall behind the tremendous advances in aviation technology. He gave the example of the anticipated flight time between New York and London of slightly over two hours — just about the time it takes to get passengers through the customs and into the centre of the city from the airport.

Israel cannot afford to lag behind, he stressed, adding that new electronic equipment costing more than $1m. and a new control tower are already planned for Lydda in the course of the next few years.

Under I.C.A.O. regulations, Israel is responsible for air space extending 17 miles over the Mediterranean along the entire length of her shores. If we are to maintain our position, our land installations must be kept up to date, he declared.

Mr. Michael refused to comment himself on the proposals of the current negotiations in London for an extension of El Al's landing rights on trans-Atlantic flights. Without commenting on the current negotiations, he said that he hoped that some compromise would be reached to enable El Al to continue its London service.

The Britannia Purchase
Mr. Michael defended the purchase of the turbo-jet Britannia aircraft by saying that, in view of the circumstances prevailing at the time, it was a necessary step. He said that the aircraft was a first post-war model and rapidly becoming obsolete, while no one had thought of buying the new Boeing 707 at the time it was made by Boeing and Douglas in the race to be the first on the market.

The Britannia is still serviceable, Mr. Michael said, and that they could hold their own on El Al's routes for at least another year. He estimated their serviceable life at five years, not less than two.

NIXON

A visit should be made. There are a number of factors to take into consideration, some on the plus side, and some on the minus side.

"On balance I believe that some time Mr. Khrushchev should be invited to come to the U.S."

Mr. Nixon said he thought the Soviet Premier had some "very real misconceptions" about the U.S. position and the attitudes of the American people.

"I think that by going to the U.S. and seeing at first hand, that this would serve to reduce and to remove those misconceptions which may exist."

As part of the "visit" query, Mr. Nixon answered questions from Western and Eastern correspondents on Russo-American trade, foreign military bases, nuclear tests and Germany.

On trade: "We should explore ways in which peaceful trade can be increased between our two countries."

On bases, Mr. Nixon said that American troops overseas would be dismantled when an agreed and fool-proof disarmament pact had been signed.

On the suspension of nuclear tests, Mr. Nixon said the record showed that the U.S. had an unassailable position in trying to reach agreement which would really work and not be merely signed bits of paper.

On Germany: "It is difficult for me to think that the Germans who live in West Germany are all devils and the Germans who happen to live in West Germany are all saints."

now to find "new motives and sources of strength to maintain its discipline."

To meet these tasks, Dr. Goldmann urged drastic changes in the present Jewish communal structure, suggesting that "all efforts and funds which were devoted to fighting anti-Semitism, or to philanthropic relief and social work, will have to be switched to a new program of Jewish education and the participation of the apportioning of Israel."

Another task facing Jewry is the need to "adapt to the basic rights of every human being to choose the country where he lives or at least the right to leave a country in which he does not want to remain."

He deplored the fact that in Eastern Europe and in North Africa this is either challenged or denied de facto.

Dr. Goldmann concluded by stressing that the time has come when "we will have to create the new Jewish organization which will unite the Diaspora for its cooperation with Israel, and Israel for its tie-up with the Diaspora and for the Jewish people."

The Swedish Prime Minister, Mr. Tage Erlander, welcomed the opening session and reminded the delegates of the close links which united the Swedish nation and the Jewish people.

Mr. Erlander had a special greeting for the Israel representatives: "In your country, under extremely difficult conditions, a peaceful work of development has taken place which every observer must find deeply impressive."

The only delegation to the Conference from a Communist country is the five-man Polish team, led by the chairman of the Social and Cultural Council of Polish Jews, Mr. Hersz Szulman.

Three hundred delegates and over 100 observers will extensively debate a 51-page political report on conditions in many countries and international anti-Semitism.

The report says that Tunisian undertakings in respect of Jewish rights, including the right of emigration, have been observed and President Bourguiba recently assured the WJC of his personal friendship of the Arab League should not be taken as indicating "automatic acceptance of the League's anti-Israel policies."

In Morocco, the report says, though the problem involving emigration of Jews has been exaggerated, many problems remain to be solved, not least being the "exclusively Moroccan nationalistic attitude" adopted by some Jews.

'El Al Must Fly Jets If It Hopes to Compete'

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter

A warning that El Al will have to operate jet planes if it is to hold its own on the trans-Atlantic route was issued yesterday by the official in charge of aviation in the Ministry of Transport.

Mr. Uri Michael, Director of the Civil Aviation Department, told a press conference in Jerusalem that the future of trans-Atlantic air travel lies with jets. While El Al is one of the 14 companies currently flying these routes, it will be squeezed out if swift action is not taken, he added.

Mr. Michael was reluctant to say whether his Ministry has submitted plans to the Government for the purchase of jets. He emphasized, however, that it takes up to two years to acquire new planes after an order is placed.

In the meantime, the Ministry is going ahead with its plans to invest IL1m. in extending and strengthening one of the runways at Lydda Airport to make it suitable for jet traffic. Again it was noted that if other airlines were to fly their more modern planes to Israel, El Al will be left out in the cold in its own backyard unless it can compete on equal terms.

Britannia Purchase

Mr. Michael defended the purchase of the turbo-jet Britannia aircraft by saying that, in view of the circumstances prevailing at the time, it was a necessary step. He said that the aircraft was a first post-war model and rapidly becoming obsolete, while no one had thought of buying the new Boeing 707 at the time it was made by Boeing and Douglas in the race to be the first on the market.
